

Sick kids? That's your problem!

I got my first job at Superstore.
But despite all the time I've put in, I still don't get any respect from management.

Just a few weeks ago, I called in to ask for an unpaid day off. I told them that my kids were sick. They told me that was my problem not theirs.

That day, I ended up sending my son to daycare with a miserable cold. And I went in for my shift – to keep my job.

This kind of thing happens all the time at Superstore. Too often, they tell people to leave their sick kids behind or come to work sick themselves.

That's why Superstore workers in the Edmonton area are talking about a strike.
Nobody deserves to be treated this way.

Models were used for the production of this ad.

Hey Superstore, All we're asking for is a little respect!

A message from the United Food and Commercial Workers, Local 401